More than the loss of the stock. I am afraid we will have to close down for about ten days until a new stack can be placed in position. The new stack will be stronger and better than the old one."

The main building of the North Toka Woolen Mills was unroofed last night. The damage is estimated at from $500 to $700. The roof is in the force of the wind literally ripped it from the boards.

Much smaller damage is reported on the North side. The Union Pacific fires are not working very satisfactorily in either direction, but the morning trains on that road were about on time.

About 8 o'clock this morning, the southwest corner of the Union Pacific stock house, which was built of No. 10 was hurt. At the time Pacific

No work is being done on the dikes today. The ground is frozen too hard to be worked. In addition to this, the Robert Kincaid and the coal company's and the Loyce Bagwell camp on Soldier creek were blown down last night. The destruction includes both the buildings and the dikes. Today the men are trying to find shelter for themselves and the horses.
